DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

1. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

2. Claims 1-12, 14-21 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Sekiguchi (5,798,864) in view of Schaefer et al. (7,094,502).

Sekiguchi discloses a projection device comprising:

A coherent light source (101), which may be a laser source;

An EASLM (203) addressed with diffraction images generated by means computer (105);

Optics (103, 104) for directing and magnifying the diffracted images to a screen (9).

Figures 9 and 10 disclose the use of plural differently colored coherent light sources for use with a single or multiple EASLM's. It would have been obvious to one skilled in the art at the time of the invention to apply the concept of Sekiguchi et al. to alternate known types of illumination systems so long as a full color image is formed because such modification is the substitution of a particular EASLM addressing means, as taught by Sekiguchi, within known structures.

In a sequential system the frame rate of the SLM would be greater than that of the viewable image formed at the screen.

With regard to Claims 7-9, 16-19, it is well known to store images within computer means for delivery to modulation systems. As such it would have been obvious to provide such computer controls means in order to allow for the projection of various images without the necessity of having to create them individually when desired.

Schaefer et al. (7,094,502) teaches that diffraction images may be encompassed by the term holographic image. This reference is provided for that teaching since the term is not utilized in Sekiguchi.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

3. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

4. Claims 2-3, 5, 15 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable Sekiguchi (5,798,864) and Schaefer et al. (7,094,502) in view of Suh (5,805,244).

Sekiguchi (5,798,864) and Schaefer et al. (7,094,502) discloses the invention substantially as claimed but does not specify the use of plural panels or sections for forming different color component images and combining them for full color image formation

Art Unit: 2851

Suh teaches the illumination of multiple displays with colored lights and the combination and projections of colored modulated lights to form a full color image. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to modify the device of the combination by providing plural imaging devices to form a combined color image on a projection surface.
